Died: 10 November 1868

Burial: All Souls' Cemetery, Kensal Green 14 November 1868 No. 47,572

I first 'met' Harry Hastings in the mid 1960's. He was introduced to me as 'The Wicked Marquis', a man who had thrown away his inheritance, and died at 26 a discredited and despised man.

Most of the mentions in books of him were of one of two extremes. He was a charming, attractive, generous man or he was a scoundrel. Sadly the only book that deals with him in any depth is a work, I am sad to say, of romantic fiction.

This small piece is an attempt to depict him as a real living, breathing human. And incidentally a man whose monetary debts were paid in full, something that cannot be said of many a more revered and respected man.

I had a decision to make about footnotes. I decided, in the end, not to include them. Much of what I have written is an interpretation of many sources; it is an honest attempt to portray the fourth, and last, Marquis of Hastings as he may have been. Following his death his wife, Florence, had all his papers, letters, betting books etc destroyed so there is, apart from a few autographs, nothing to surviving in his own hand.

He was of great benefit to Stockbridge; in the short time he was in racing he provided employment to countless people in the area. The stalls at Danebury were full and the races were considerably extended - extended too much for some scribes.

The first question is why did he decide to have his horses trained at Stockbridge? One would have thought that with his country house at Donington, Leicestershire, he would have chosen 'Headquarters' – Newmarket. It was perhaps not the location but the name of the Day family that attracted him. It was an unfortunate choice of trainer. Hastings may have been introduced to John Day by his guardian, Lord Howe, when the young Marquis was twenty or so. He had lost his father [on 13 January 1844] and mother [19 November 1858] and had only inherited his titles on the death of his brother Paulyne Reginald on 24 January 1841. The latter had dined too well and fallen into a Liverpool canal. The dowsing did not kill him but complications arising from it shortly after saw his passing in Dublin.

It has been suggested that Harry, as younger son, was petted and spoilt by his four elder sisters. Perhaps so. But there is nothing in his life to suggest his early years were any different to anyone else in his position in society. His education was mainly conducted by home tutors. He spent a year at Eton, leaving aged thirteen, and slightly longer at Christ Church College, Oxford. What he lacked in formal education he made up for by his infinite charm and good looks. He was a small man and described as 'delicate' by some. Whether this was a euphemism or not is a question. He was at times ill, when his mother died he was in Rome and unwell himself. His condition may well have been inherited. He had absolutely no regard for the welfare of animals and those humans outside his social circle.

He came to Stockbridge in 1862 and raced a few horses as 'Mr Weysford', colours, grey red spots. His first runner was Consternation [1859 b f by Alarm – Mabel] who ran twice on 6 August at Brighton.

In 1863, racing under his own name, he had registered his scarlet and white hoops, white cap colours [second colours same, red cap] and raced on a much larger scale. The same year shortly before his 21st birthday he was elected to the Jockey Club.

His first runner in his own name was Garotter [1861 b c by West Australian – Wombat's dam by Birdcatcher] unplaced in the Althorp Park Stakes on Wednesday 25th March at the Northampton and Pytchley Hunt meeting. Alf Day had the ride. Tippler [1860 b c by Tumbler – Chloris] was probably his best horse that year winning six of his ten races, and was his first runner at Stockbridge [Bibury Club Meeting] winning the £100 Handicap on 17 June. In total Hastings won fifteen races with nine horses and about £3,000 in stakes. [For some reason press compiled 'winning owners' only credit Hastings with six horses, winning seven races and £2,500.]

In 1864 he would win 45 races with 12 horses and £10,153 in stakes. He also had the 'good fortune' to marry Lady Florence Cecilia Paget, Lord Anglesey's daughter. A noted beauty, used to getting her own way, and a pursuer of 'manly sports' Flo Paget was not a good choice for Hastings. Their mode of marriage, an unannounced but carefully planned event, took place on 16 July. The nuptials came as something of a shock to fellow owner [with an income greater than Hastings] Henry Chaplin, who thought he was going down the aisle with Florence on the 4th of August. What on earth Florence was doing marrying Hastings one cannot guess. Almost certainly the marriage was never consummated. Anglesey and his eldest son were certainly happy at the marriage as Hastings was a much surer advancer of money than Chaplin.

Had Harry married Alice Lisle Phillipps following his 21st birthday, as was at one time mooted, everything would have been different. But the 'engagement' fell through. The Phillipps were Roman Catholics, and ardent in their belief. Marriage to a man who had eleven C of E livings at his disposal was always unlikely.

In the following years Hastings won the following stakes: 1865: £5,997, 1866: £12,837, 1867: 30,451, 1868: £2,610, though in the last year some of Hastings' horses ran in the name of Henry Padwick. Bearing in mind training costs, and the Days were always known to charge heavily for everything, and the huge entry fees it is easy to see how a huge annual income could be dissipated.

Stockbridge Racecourse ~ The Hastings' Era

In addition running Donington, where there seems to be no account taken of cost, and a large town house, was a considerable drain on resources. Had Hastings stuck to modestly betting on his own horses and avoided playing cards he would assuredly have died a wealthy man – whenever that was to occur. And on the subject of expense Florence had simply no idea of the value of money or reality at all; she referred to the Chetwynd town house following her second marriage a 'a nice little house'. It was a fully staffed ten bedroom establishment. Hastings' was also a most generous friend, and he acquired 'friends' who used his generosity to virtually rob him. With 'friends' like Freddy Granville, who was later to avoid a hefty prison sentence by a legal technicality, one hardly needed enemies.

To what extent Hastings' compulsive gambling and lack of judgement was fuelled by his medical condition is an interesting question. There is no doubt that from 1867, when his occasional paralysis and hacking cough became a source of comment, he totally lost whatever betting skill he had. There is no doubt that he was shamelessly manipulated by those to whom friendship and honour meant nothing.

The pivotal point in Harry's life came on 22 May 1867 when Hermit [1864 ch c by Newminster – Seclusion] won the Derby for Henry Chaplin and his racing manager James Machell. The horse was trained by the Bloss brothers at Bedford Cottage, Newmarket. For some reason from the previous autumn Hastings had taken into his head that Hermit would not win the Derby, and started what was virtually a 'one horse book' about the race.¹ Almost always when Hermit was mentioned in conversation Hastings would offer to lay the horse at odds much more generous than those bookmakers thought prudent. This meant that his liabilities were some £130,000 over Hermit, including £20,000 or so to Henry Chaplin. The Danebury horse was Vauban [1864 br c by Muscovite - Palm], the eventual 6/4 favourite.² It has never been calculated how much Harry had on Vauban but it must have been a very substantial sum.

Hastings' looked to be in clover when, ten days before the Derby, Hermit broke a blood vessel. Had it been any other team than Machell and the Blosses they would have given up and advised Chaplin to withdraw the horse. However, within a couple of days Hermit was back at light work and all was not lost, including the £68,000 Machell stood to win over the colt. On Derby day very long odds were available about Hermit and Hastings could have covered a large part of his liabilities by taking the 100/1 and 66/1 available, but he would not. Machell helped himself to 1,000/15 three times to 'top up'.

- 1 HERMIT BETTING. Hermit Was offered at 15/1 in December 1866 and there were no takers. By mid January he was on offer at 100/7, backers wanting 100/6. By mid February 1,000/40 was taken and on the 26 1,000/60 was taken to win £10-12,000. By 11 March he was backed at 10/1 and he stayed at that price till 10 April when it was rumoured Hermit had had a bad trial with Indigestion and some lucky backers got 100/3 to their money. [Indigestion, at various times owned by Lord Westmoreland, Henry Chaplin, Capt Machell and Sir Charles Legard was a sprinter pure and simple and probably ran Hermit off his feet in the first quarter mile.] The following week Hermit was backed freely at 10/1; and as low as 8/1 was booked to £500 on 24 April. Thereafter 10/1 was taken forcing 9/1 2 May, 8/1 3 May and an offer of 6/1 [no takers] on 7 May. 20/1 was had on 13 May [the day he broke a blood vessel] thereafter 50/1 and 1,000/25 was taken. S. P. 100/1.
 - 2 VAUBAN BETTING The 'Danebury pot', could be backed at 40/1 in November 1866, and throughout most December, January and February was on offer at 1,000/30, this being taken freely on 26 February, which reduced his price to 25/1, further interest saw him backed as low as 16/1. From 23 April Vauban's price collapsed mainly due to reports of a bad trial by Hermit 1,000/300 being taken. For a period around 7/2 was his price, contracting to 9/4 - 5/2 in early May. When The Rake burst a blood vessel [17 May] Vauban was clipped to 7/4. There is no doubt that the volume of Hastings' money was in part due to the shortening price.

Stockbridge Racecourse ~ The Hastings' Era

Hermit was ridden by John Daley, an unfashionable lightweight who later became completely unfashionable, indeed unemployable, due to his inability to keep his mouth shut - he had to go to Germany to make a living. But on that day, following his instructions to the letter brought Hermit with one long run and landed the Derby by a neck from Marksman second, Vauban was third.

This is the place to put on record that Hastings was not the underbidder to Chaplin at Eltham on the day Hermit was sold as a yearling. Not only was he not the underbidder he was not there. His absence with that of the Duke of Hamilton had an adverse effect on the prices paid.

Harry was in a pickle. He had to raise £130,000 by the following Monday or Tuesday – settling days at 'the corner' – Monday for agreeing books and Tuesday parting with the cash. Well not quite that sum as Chaplin asked if he might accommodate Hastings by delaying payment the £20,000 owing to him. Harry took up the offer, indeed he never paid £1,500 of the debt in his lifetime. Hastings decided to sell his Loudon [Scotland] estate, and his cousin, the Marquess of Bute, eventually purchased the lands for £300,000. This did not solve the immediate liquidity problem he therefore approached the solicitor and money lender of Hill Street, Henry Padwick, for funds. The funds were supplied, at a price.

Henry Padwick, when named as an executor in Hastings' will was described as 'My friend'. When they first met Padwick was in his mid-fifties, a fellow owner and supposedly the son of a Horsham butcher. He was also a solicitor and money-lender and he was very much a man of business. He died in 1879, aged 72, and was worth a million, having had the 'management' of many estates of distressed noblemen.

It is one of the major mysteries of Hastings' life of how he got through nearly half a million in money in the time between 'Hermit's Derby' and November 1868. Eighteen months. It is important to state here the fact that all those who were owed money by Hastings were paid down to the last penny. It took a couple of years after his death but those that submitted a claim were paid in full and with 4% p.a. interest in consideration of the delay.

When Harry appeared at the 1867 Ascot meeting he was cheered to the echo as a 'sportsman' who had paid his debts. A rather more pleasant greeting that he was to experience in 1868.

If 1867 and its Derby were the pivotal point 1868 was to prove a total crash. The crash was due in no small measure to Hastings' 'friends' and servants who by this time had realised they had a pawn they could manipulate at their will. He was a very sick man and one can only guess at his mental and physical state. How people can have treated a man in such obvious physical distress in the way they did is despicable; they could have let him have the thing he most desired, probably the only thing he ever desired, a Derby victory, but this they denied him.

Hastings had in 1867 possibly the best two year old filly ever, and certainly up to that time. She was Lady Elizabeth [1865 by b f Trumpeter – Miss Bowzer, bought privately from Sam Rogers]. Much has been written about the over-training and over-racing of Lady Elizabeth at two, including the strong gallops and trials she was put through at Danebury. She was in fact ruined by her efforts. In all in 1867 she won twelve races and £9,165. What she won in bets for Hastings must have been a king's ransom, but it still was not enough as he was in deep financial waters and indeed had to put up his entire stud for sale at Stockbridge on 23 November. In the event a large number of horses were 'bought in' including Lady Elizabeth and The Earl.

Stockbridge Racecourse ~ The Hastings' Era

In view of the scandal that was to be the 1868 Derby it should be said that Hastings considered The Earl [1865 b h by Young Melbourne - Bay Celia] his 'Derby Horse' and if Lady Elizabeth had to be over used it did not matter. Sadly the Danebury crew did not think the same and happily laid the colt at 40/1 for the Blue Riband. They thus had a huge motive for The Earl not running at Epsom.

In the winter of 1867/1868 Hastings was in deep financial water, though you would not think it from the way Harry and Florence were living. On 6 January Lady Elizabeth was 6/1 favourite for the Derby. Hastings eventually stood to win £100,000 over the filly but it must be said that all the money was on via 'commissioners'. Harry was a defaulter in a very large way and the only way he could bet was in this fashion, and the only way he could retain any winnings.

Was Lady Elizabeth 'tried' over this winter? Was she even galloped? The question must be asked. Was it not obvious that the filly had, unsurprisingly, lost her form? From January to race day, Wednesday 27 May, her odds had contracted from 6/1 to 7/4 [favourite] but in the race she made absolutely no show or looked at any time as if she would take and hand in the finish. She was saddled at Sherwood's well out of the gaze of spectators and with Cock of the Walk went straight to the starting post without passing the stands. It is said that Fordham's face 'was a study' at the post - he can have had no doubt of the outcome.

If The Earl had not travelled to Paris and won the Grand Prix easily on the 7th June as the even money favourite there might not have been quite the uproar that followed. The Earl was taken to Epsom on the Tuesday before the Derby but was scratched on Hastings' explicit orders – or at least that is what he said. However, what pressure was put on him by Padwick, to whom Harry owed a fortune, Harry Hill and the Danebury faction heaven only knows. One should remember that in less than six months he would be dead. When The Earl won a couple of races at Ascot the fat was really in the fire leading to 'the spider and the fly' episode when Henry Rous was rather indiscreet in letters to The Times. Reading his contribution it is obvious that the Admiral had a 'mole' at Danebury. Would The Earl have won the Derby had he taken part? A week before the Derby he was at 100/8. Ten to one was freely taken on the Monday before the race and 9/1 with a run. He was struck out at 7pm on Tuesday 26 May. There was a great deal of being wise after the event and that nobody can be sure that The Earl would have handled the course, and things happen in a race that no one can predict. There is no doubt that the Danebury group benefited largely. My opinion, for what it is worth, is that The Earl ridden by Tom Cannon was excellent value at 100/8 and the 9/1 [with a run] a good price. Many of the press contingent held him in high regard. In addition he stayed and had won the Newmarket Biennial, one mile, beating Blue Gown, the Derby winner, by a neck – level weights.

Like most legal confrontations on turf matters the threatened defamation actions between Rous and Day did not take place, Hastings was dead and the matter was quietly dropped. Rous was in an excellent position to defend his position. He had behind him a 'fighting fund' of £35,000, a £1,000 promised from each of 35 noblemen.

In the summer Harry and a couple of companions went cruising in Norwegian waters in search of salmon. What they found were mosquitoes by the million and they left for Iceland. Ladybird Hastings' luxurious and purpose built yacht had been sold but he had enough money to refit The Campaners [or Campanara] for the trip. On his return, 1st or 2nd September he was hoping to find The Earl in top form and he had scraped together the last big plunge he could muster on the St

Leger. The colt was trading at 5/2 and 2/1 for the Classic, one observer stating his correct price was 6/5on. As might be predicted on the 4th September 'John Day's son' brought the news that The Earl was lame and could not run in the big race. The money was lost and to all effect so was Hastings.

There was a strange incident at the time. When Harry returned from his cruise he approached Padwick and requested £10,000 'to put himself right'; the advance would be against some property in which Harry had a life interest [in Scotland]. Alternatively if The Earl won the St Leger Padwick would get his loan back sooner [presumably with interest]. Padwick got the money in notes and took it to Doncaster and gave it to Hastings in his hotel room - at least he said he did - a room he was sharing with a Major Wilkinson. Padwick did not get a receipt or any other record of the loan! Wilkinson and Lord Ker claim they saw some cash handed over but not how much. In the end Padwick compromised with the other side for £6,000. This came out in 1871 in the case Bubb v Yelverton.

Florence did not have long to wait in her marriage to find herself disappointed and soon was writing to Henry Chaplin on a regular basis. She even asked him for money at one stage and Chaplin 'won' some for her and passed it on. While Harry was in northern waters in the summer of 1868 Florence contrived to dine with Chaplin. Any thought that she might reunite with Chaplin after Harry's passing were however dashed by Chaplin. He had been congratulated in 1864 over his 'lucky escape' and was not tempted again. Florence had paid a price too, in 1868 she looked careworn and had lost that sparkle that had given rise to 'The Pocket Venus' appellation.

It was only four months after Harry's death that Florence was 'romantically linked' to a serving officer. Nothing came of it, but in 1870 she married George Chetwynd. Florence died 3rd November 1907.

In 1876 Chaplin married another Florence - Lady Florence Leveson-Gower, the elder daughter of the third Duke of Sutherland. Chaplin lived a long life and spent all his money in the process, passing away on 29 May 1923.

Harry had his last day's racing at Newmarket on Tuesday 22nd September 1868 when his former Athena [1865 ch f by Stockwell - Heroine], now Henry Padwick's, won the Grand Duke Michael Stakes in a canter by three lengths. Harry died of syphilis on 10th November 1868. Florence, one might ask in a measure of revenge [?], had Harry buried at Kensal Green on 14 November rather than with his ancestors at Donington. The memorial drew many compliments. The monument, unveiled 4 May 1870, was executed by Messrs Gaffin at a reputed cost of £2,000.

BIBURY CLUB

Tuesday 23 June.

It could scarcely be expected but that the recent Turf scandals would somewhat affect a meeting held on ground which, rightly or wrongly, has been considered the scene of them.

There was a flatness in tone perceptible in the proceedings this afternoon beyond the usual dullness of the Club day, and though the racing was good and the fields were larger than was expected, everything was rather tame, and the attendance much below the average.

HANDICAP SWEEPSTAKES [1:00] of 5 sovs. each, with. 50 added, for 2-yr-olds and 3-yr-olds. Winners extra. Jockeys to ride. From the Bush in, about five furlongs. 9 subs.
